

Oceans in the 2030 Agenda: The role of Regional Governance

Side event during the UN Oceans Conference,
6 June 2017, 9.30 – 17.00,
Permanent Mission of Germany to the United Nations

Hosted by the German Federal Ministry for the Environment, Nature Conservation, Building and Nuclear Safety, Swedish Ministry of the Environment, United Nations Environment Programme

Together with the Institute for Advanced Sustainability Studies, Institute for Sustainable Development and International Relations, TMG – Think Tank for Sustainability, German Federal Ministry for Economic Development and Cooperation

The degradation of the marine environment has outpaced the development of the international ocean governance landscape. A central challenge to achieving SDG 14 comes from the transboundary nature of both marine resources and threats to ocean sustainability: Neither fish stocks nor marine pollution are bound by national borders. Addressing these challenges requires collective actions by States to develop integrated approaches to ocean governance and solutions to shared problems. The 2030 Agenda provides the opportunity to address complex ocean sustainability challenges and to advance regionally coordinated cooperation across sectors and stakeholders.

This event will bring together representatives of relevant regional and international organisations, ocean governance practitioners from States, civil society and science to discuss the role of regional cooperation through which countries and competent organisations could work together towards the harmonised and cross-sectoral implementation of SDG 14 and other ocean related SDGs. It will include geographies such as: Western Indian Ocean, Pacific, North-East Atlantic, Mediterranean, or the Baltic.

The event will provide a venue during the UN Ocean Conference to engage in active discussions on regional cooperation and ocean governance, and for developing recommendations to the main conference on strengthening regional ocean governance for ocean SDG delivery.
